Abiding by the following rules can help prevent damage to your amplifier, yourself and others. To reduce the risk of electrical shock, NEVER remove or otherwise attempt to defeat the ground pin of the power cord. Also, avoid sudden and intense impact. If the unit has been subjected to any of the preceding abuses, have it looked at by an authorized service center. NEVER spray liquid cleaners onto the amplifier. Wipe it with a slightly damp ened, lintfree cloth to remove dirt and film. Refer the unit to an authorized service center for inspection. Such damage is progres sive and irreversible.

ZoSo, April 24, 2004 in Music But! ever since I have picked up that Les Paul in guitar center, I have been addicted to guitars. Almost to the point where I have begged my teachers to let me bring in my guitar so I can practice during class when we arent doing anything. Its on the Gibson SG as far as Ive looked. I think it was on a Jay Turser too but Im not entirely sure. Its just so beautiful. It has to be signed, hand delivered, and have a certificate of authenticity all from Jimmy Page himself. Because he is my idol. Jimi Hendrix is god we have cleared that much up. You dont get much better than Jimi Hendrix. If you do, you probably have 4 arms to play the guitar. Ive always seen it like my top 10 guitarists are I understand John Paul Jones is a bassist. But he is a man who could play a 3 necked guitar and bass foot pedals all at the same time. Hes so underrated. I mean, he only invented a whole new genre of music. The early 60s D35s sell for 2,300 bucks which mean the finish on the guitar is not very good. Sorry about being skeptical, but yeah I asked my dad about them, and apparently they were his when he was 1416 year old, then he put them into storage. I dont think the strings have been replaced for 30 years.

Sorry about being skeptical, but yeah My dad bought it back in 75 when his old guitar d29, forget the year was stolen, and since then both him and I have taken extremely good care of it. but yeah My dad bought it back in 75 when his old guitar d29, forget the year was stolen, and since then both him and I have taken extremely good care of it. All Im saying is that it is just about impossible too keep a guitar that old for so long and still have a perfect finish I always wash my hands at least once before I play it, and I never let anybody else play it unless they know what theyre doing. Call it obsessive, but when youve got something as beautiful as that, youre allowed to be. Just so you know. Its this bootleg thingy that is alright.Its this bootleg thingy that is alright.Its this bootleg thingy that is alright.Its this bootleg thingy that is alright.Maybe on stage Maybe hes not planning to sell it But, Neol, you should of got the Strat in cream, IMO they look better. Second thing being that I just cant get into playing one for a long period of time. Im not sure why. He has a 2003 Gibson Les Paul, handmade, and its got kind of a cheese paint scheme. I dont know how to describe it better. He picked it up for about 2000. He also had some sort of a surf green stratocaster that probably gave him a good run for his age but holy lord or any religion did it sing. You ever seen one of those. Oh lordy lord its badass. He makes his own pickups, well.He is a very accomplished guitarist. Ill get mine up sometime. I can stand with one foot on a chair for a while OK, but.I can stand with one foot on a chair for a while OK, but.

I think part of playing guitar is how comfortable you are when you start playing it, I kinda like standing up because that way I can train myself to learn different ways to see if that increases my productivity Not too good at pull offs yet but I havent really gotten into them that much. It was almost able to register on the Richter scale.
